ABSTRACT

In an effort to help alleviate functional illiteracy this directory identified organizations and individuals that are actively working to increase adults' functional competencies. The major organizations listed in the directory include state departments of education and local affiliates of the International Reading Association, Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc., and National Affiliation for Literacy Advance. Entries are given alphabetically by state and within states by cities. Each listing contains an address and phone number. (CSS)

INTRODUCTION

More than 23 million adult Americans are functionally illiterate – that is, they are unable to meet the MINIMAL reading requirements of the society in which we live. This may seem almost incomprehensible to a sophisticated and highly technical society which has consistently supported free and compulsory public education, but the fact remains that one in five Americans over 16 years of age has serious trouble reading or speaking English. As a result, they are severely limited in their abilities to function as adults, workers and citizens.

It is not the intent of this organization to lay blame for this massive waste of human resources, nor do we pretend to have the expertise it takes to debate educational philosophies. Rather, it is our intent to go straight to the heart of the problem and to address functional literacy as a basic human need, both defined* and immediate.

The immediacy of the need is reflected in the fact that the Navy is having trouble finding enough eligible recruits to successfully man the battleships; the young sailors cannot read the Navy manuals. It is reflected in the fact that almost half of the prisoners in our state and federal institutions are illiterate; it is estimated that illiteracy cost $2 billion of a total $8 billion spent in the criminal justice system in 1970. It is reflected in the fact that over one-third of the mothers receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children are illiterate; since an illiterate woman's earnings generally can't meet her child's needs, we do. In 1970, $2.96 billion of a total $5.9 billion spent on food stamps, welfare checks, visits to the doctor, the dentist, immunization shots, corrective lenses, lunches and breakfasts at school was directly attributable to undereducation of welfare recipients.

In terms of human costs, it has been shown that functional illiteracy often leads to chronic unemployment, which can lead to alcoholism, which can lead to marital problems, and so on in a continuing downward spiral of humiliation and suffering.

We optimistically believe that the resources are available to tackle this problem. There are currently several grass-roots organizations and thousands of individuals across the country working to alleviate functional illiteracy. This directory is an attempt to identify these organizations and individuals in order to bring them together, to link the people offering these services with the people needing them.

The major organizations listed in the directory include:

IRA – The International Reading Association, while not directly involved in the problem of adult illiteracy, is of special interest because of their professional concern with reading. Made up of individuals engaged in teaching or supervision of reading at any school level, the group's aim is to encourage the study of reading problems, to stimulate and promote research in developmental, corrective and remedial reading; and to disseminate knowledge helpful in the solution of problems related to reading. Contact: The International Reading Association, Ralph C. Staiger, Executive Director, 6 Tyre Avenue, Newark, DE 19711. (302) 731-1600.

LVA – Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc. is a national organization founded in 1962 in Syracuse, New York. Its primary premise is that well-trained and carefully supported volunteers can be effective tutors of adults, and that with the enlistment of this huge pool of talent, a significant impact on the problem can be made. Currently, 20,000 tutors and students are involved in LVA's basic reading and English as a Second Language (ESL) programs. Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc., Sixth Floor Midtown Plaza, 700 East Water Street, Syracuse, NY 13210. (315) 474-7039.

NALA – The National Affiliation for Literacy Advance, a membership organization of Laubach Literacy International, exists to promote and coordinate volunteer adult literacy programs throughout the United States and Canada. The NALA program, which is an extension of the work of Dr. Frank Laubach, emphasizes the use of volunteer tutors on an "each one teach one" basis, using carefully structured literacy primers and easy-to-read follow-up literature.

State Departments of Education – These agencies appear at the beginning of each state's listings, along with any other state-wide agencies. They are mandated by the Adult Basic Education Act to encourage and expand basic educational programs for adults to enable them to overcome English language limitations, to improve basic education in preparation for occupational training and more profitable employment, and to become more productive citizens. These agencies can provide you with information on state-sponsored Adult Basic Education (ABE) services in your area.

The basic eligibility requirement for participating in most of the programs listed in this directory is a willingness to learn. Most agencies also stipulate that the learner be over 16 years of age and not attending a public school. If there are other, more specific, requirements, they are included in the agency listing. Most of the organizations provide their services free of charge; others charge for books and other educational material, but these charges usually run no higher than $10 to $15. The times, locations, and frequency of tutoring sessions are arranged at the convenience of the tutors and learners.

We hope this directory contributes to the sharing of information that is so essential if the problem of functional illiteracy is to be reduced. If you know of organizations participating in the effort that should be included, or if there is a mistake in the listing of your organization, please use the form in the back of the book to let us know.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who helped in making this directory possible, and also to wish every one of you much success in your work!

Sincerely,
The Staff of the AAAA Contact Center
Patricia Knapp, Project Coordinator
